What happens to Creatures that Live in the Water When they Pass Over?

By Maurice Barbanell 2011

I remember a talk that Silver Birch gave and he was saying there are no oceans in the spirit world. Is that correct?

That is correct. There are great water areas.

But not oceans.

Not oceans. Oceans are a perception or a product of the Earth Plane.

So what happens to these absolutely majestic animals, the mammals that live in these waters?

There are waters within the astral plane which you call the Summerland, which they are contained within. The very fact that one happens to live within the salt waters of the oceans and others live within the non-salt waters of the rivers is immaterial because once they, like you have divested themselves of their material form then their requirement for material breathe, food etc is also eliminated. But the soul of all the individual animals, insects etc are contained within a group soul and even though they have the individuality of their own being they are part of a group soul. In a simplified form it is no different than we are part of the Great Spirit. We are all individuals within ourselves but we are all part of the one.

One for all and all for one.

No. We are part of the one. We are part of the Great Spirit.

The thought came to me and my imagination ran wild, and I could just imagine all these big mammals suddenly walking around. I said well if there's no big oceans for them they would have to walk around!

The immensity of the Summerland is very difficult to perceive when you try to contain it within the confines of the Earth Plane. The Earth Plane is in essence very, very small. The Summerland, in Earth Plane terms, is a hundred million times greater in area than that of the Earth Plane and that perception within itself is very difficult to conceive. We understand that and that is why we very rarely would measure one against the other. We try very hard to get people to conceptualize the astral world as being so similar to the Earth Plane because then people's perception can accept it far more readily. In reality the Earth Plane is similar to the Summerland rather than the other way around.
