Are your Organs Still Part of you in the Summer Land?

By 2011 Maurice Barbanell

A member of the group commented about falling over and suffering from bruising.

That's all part of the physical body isn't it? It is not a problem which I have anymore. After all if you haven't got blood how can you get a bruise? Don't know if you've ever thought of that, that when you're in your astral body you don't have blood. We don't even have a heart. You see you could say we are truly heartless, but that statement is true but yet false. How's that for a conundrum for you? It's true but it's false. It is true that once you evolve up to the higher levels of the Summerland the internal organs which control your physical being then become redundant, but when you're in the lower – I don't like that term – when you have not advanced in purity, then all these organs are still actually part of your being. Your heart still pumps, you still have a pulse. You might find that strange. Do you find that strange?

No. What I would find strange is – do they still have the problems associated with having organs?

No. You don't have illness, but you still have the organs. I had the experience at one time with Estelle when I was there and Red Cloud was composed of ectoplasm. He came in his full form and he put his hand out and he said "John, come and hold it". I said "Can I? Is it alright?" and he said "I wouldn't have asked you if it wasn't alright would I?" and I held it and you could feel the pulse of the heart beating. He had a very hard scaly hand though, but then again that was part of his essence, of his being, because they worked with their hands and when you come back and you are utilising the astral body of the essence of the being who was here, then you develop all the characteristics when you bring your vibration to the level (I cannot put it any other way - for I was trying to use another word) but when you bring it to the level which is required for who you're speaking to, then the essence of that being is exactly as it was when it was here – when I say here I mean on the Earth Plane. Therefore if he had scars they would be there and evident, if he had a strong heartbeat that would be there and evident. We had medical physicians, you know, who came and actually measured the pulse.

Were they astonished?

No not really because the medical person who did it was a true believer and therefore he would have been more astonished if it hadn't been. It's a strange thing you know, even though you don't really know, you have an expectation don't you? It's the same thing as whilst you're on the Earth Plane you understand the Summerland and the planes beyond, but whilst we are in the physical we don't really know do we?

I had what you would have considered the best training, the best proof that anybody on the Earth Plane could have had. Nobody could have asked for more but when my time came I was still worried of the unknown. It doesn't matter that it was only a very short period of time that it concerned me, the fact that it did concern me really showed my lack of faith didn't it? Showed that I had doubts and why should I have had doubts? I have had so many proofs. I had seen. I had been taken to the Halls of Learning. I've walked through the doors. I saw it and yet I was still afraid. I was still concerned because we all have that nagging fear of the unknown and it doesn't matter how much you say you understand there's still that essence of the unknown, albeit a fleeting essence, it's still there. We try very hard to eliminate it.

We have expectations for ourselves. It's not wrong to have high expectations because if you don't have high expectations you will never achieve anything will you?

Sometimes maybe it is too high.

Yes but you have to keep striving. As they said in that quaint musical "if you don't have a dream how can you have a dream come true". It's true is it not, a song from South Pacific is it not?

Yes.
