Teaching People when They are Ready

By 2013 Maurice Barbanell

Sometimes we have to slowly feed spiritual knowledge a little bit at a time, so as not to be totally confronting. A good example of our communication is what Estelle is doing with a lady from the healing group. She was exceptionally unenlightened but her mind and her eyes are being opened and her understanding now of spiritual teaching is improving all the time, but it's only improving because of her contact. Albeit the fact that the reason she kept coming to the healing circle was so that she could keep contact with her husband, who was part of our group but now in the Summerland. This is why we allowed him to hang around a bit and occasionally put his two penn'th in. It is not two penn'th any more is it? It's probably more like two pound. It's devaluation you see. But that's another example where we utilised a situation to assist an individual and it was almost like dangling a carrot wasn't it. You come to the healing circle and you will be able to talk to your husband. Even though for quite a considerable time he was not allowed to come. He slept for quite awhile, but that didn't deter her from coming did it?

No it didn't.

So therefore that just shows that the seed was planted and it germinated to the point where she was genuinely interested and asking questions and asking questions because she wanted to know. I thought that Estelle did an exceptional good job on Saturday.

Yes she certainly did.

Well she did spend an awful lot of time researching you know. Because it's something that a lot of the people on the Earth Plane don't fully comprehend, is that we have limited knowledge ourselves and if we want to talk on a particular subject which we hadn't necessarily covered in our thinking, there is no point in us just putting out an explanation which hasn't been pre-thought because if you do that you can be giving them the wrong message. So therefore you're far better to go away and research it. Ask the people who know better and then with that fuller knowledge you can then explain it in a manner which the person will understand.

Really bone up on things.

But the essence or the importance of the comment I made was, you answer it in a manner that the person can understand. Because I could explain something to you and you will say, I heard what you're saying but it didn't really make a lot of sense to me. But because you come from a different mindset, it makes perfect sense to you. Do you understand what I'm saying?

Oh yes. You have to find a way otherwise it is superfluous. You can't teach the person unless you speak their language.

You can't make a universal discussion on all subjects because people are all different.

They all think in a different way, or understand the same subject in a different way.

Because their learning curve up to that point is different and therefore their grasp on a subject is different.

But you have the advantage. At least you have avenues open to you that you can explore. You can go to the house, sorry, the Halls of Learning.

We can go the House of Learning if you prefer.
